

A Kicking Trip #1 to the Billy Goat Trail: May 1, 2004

We triumphed over nature on Saturday morning on our inaugural hiking trip to the Billy Goat Trail in Great Falls, MD. All those who set out returned intact, for the most part -- some skin was left behind on the trail. We began our hike at 9:00 am on the dot on a crisp Saturday morning. Highlights included scrambling over rocks, fording bodies of water, wildlife spotting (turtles, a water snake, a heron, a lizard, toads, and several domesticated dogs), and removing a boulder from Megan's shoe.

Stay tuned for information on our next hike/outdoor activity, tentatively planned for Sunday, May 16 in the afternoon. (We intend to vary the days and times of future activities for those of you who can't drag it out of bed in the a.m. You know who you are.)

Suggestions for future activities are welcome, although we reserve the right to veto or at least sneer at any lame suggestions.

Love,
Lee and Megan, Intrepid Adventurers Extraordinaire

Professional photography courtesy of Roman Binder

Best practices:

Worst practice:

